

Chiyoda Sanbancho Campus

The Chiyoda Sanbancho Campus is located in the heart of Tokyo, the seat of government and the economic center of Japan. Students who attend courses at this campus can be stimulated by the latest trends in fashion, food, and the arts.

♥ Department of Modern Home Economics

The objective of courses in this department is to give students the ability to create a comfortable lifestyle while connecting home and society. Students engage in studies on family and home life, and further broaden their research to include community, economics, education, culture, and the global environment. Students can connect modern home economic ideals to a contemporary life that includes: clothing, food, and housing, in a comprehensive manner.

Possible careers

Designer or coordinator in fashion, interior, and food; Consumer Advisor; Small business owner; Environment Management Staff; Financial Advisor.

Department of Human Nutrition

Application pending to increase student enrollment for nationally registered dietician program

Courses in this department assists students in becoming Nutrition Specialists. Ranging from basic courses in human nutrition, to an expert specialized knowledge of nutrition in such topics as: Clinical Nutrition, Food Education and Regional Nutritional Care, Sports Nutrition, and Food Services. Students who graduate are well prepared for participation and leadership in the field of nutrition.

Possible careers

Nationally Registered Dietician; Market Researcher or Product Developer in the food industry; Menu Developer at various institutions such as schools and hospitals; Health Instructor and Supervisor.

Voices of International Students

Wang Shuling (China)
Department of Modern Home Economics

I chose the Department of Modern Home Economics because I was interested in fashion, food, and international exchange. The classes were very practical, and I could gain knowledge and the ability to work in society.

I attended the international activities provided by the university. I taught Chinese to local residents for two years, and it was an enjoyable experience. I was very impressed by my students who were enthusiastic about learning to speak Chinese.

I am going to work at an electronics retail store in Japan after I graduate. I am really looking forward to a new life in Japan.

Wang Tongyao (China)
Department of Human Life Science and Design

I am an exchange student from China. The classes in the Department were very technical and practical, and I drew a blueprint design and made a skirt for the first time. Although it was difficult at first, the professors were very supportive. I was able to learn little by little, and I gained confidence.

I attended many international exchange activities, but the most impressive activity was visiting an elementary school. It was very fun to teach about China, and to be taught about Japan from the children.

My landlord in the area was very kind. He invited me and other students for dinner, and he gave us vegetables that he grew himself. I am so glad to get the chance to study here.